Improving His Mind.

going to stop improving my It gets me into trouble all the time. Grown-up tolks can improve their minds without doing any harm, for no-body ever tells them that their conduct is such, and that there isn't the is such, and that there isn't the least excuse in the world for them; but just as sure as a boy tries to improve his mind, especially with animals, he gets into dread al difficulties.

There was a man came to our town to lecture a while ago. He had been a great traveler, and knew all about Rome and Nagara Palis and the North Pole, and such places, and father said:
"Now, Jimmy, here's an opportunity for you to leave something and improve your mind; go an I take your mother and do take an interest in something besides

Well, I went to the lecture. The man Well, I went to the lecture. The man told all about the Australian savages and their boomerang. He showed us a boomerang, which is a stick with two legs, and an Australian will throw it at a man, and it will go and hit him, and come back of its own accord. Then he told us about the way the Zulus throw their asseguis— that's the right way to spellit, and spear an Englishman that is mor'n ten rods away from them. Then spellit and spear an Englishman that is morn ten rods away from them. Then he showed a long string with a heavy lead bull on each end, and said the South Americans would throw it at a wild horse, and it would wind around the horse's legs, and tie itself into a boy-knot, and then the South American would catch the horse. But the hest of all was the account of a bullcan would catch the horse. But the host of all was the account of a bull-light which he saw in Spain, with the Queen sitting on a throne, and giving a crown of evergreens to the chief bull-lighter. He said that bull-lighting was awfully cruck, and that he told us about the above when the property is a strong to the said that the property her thankful that we it to that we might be thankful that we are so much better than those dreadful Spanish people, who will watch a bullfight all day, and think it real fun.

The next day I told Mr. Travers about the boomerang, and he said it was all time. Once there was an Austrainin savage in a circus, and he got angiv, and he threw his boomerang at a man who was in the third story of a hote! The boomerang went down one street and up another, and into the hotel door, and up stairs, and knocked the man on the head, and came back the same way right into the Australian sav-

I was so any ous to show father that I had listened to the lecture that I made a boomerang just like the one the lec-turer had. When it was done, I went turer had When it was done, I went out into the back yard, and shing it at a cat on the root of our house. It never tonched the cat, but it went right through the dining-room window, and gave Mr. Travers an awful blow in the cyc, besides lutting Sue on the nose. It stopped right there in the dining-room, and never came back to me at all, and I have believe a word the legurer said. I don't believe a word the lecturer said about it. I don't feel courage to tell only her aim, for the doctor said that if the balls had but her on the head they where it would bring up. I don't see how the Zulus ever manage to lut an Englishman; but Mr. Travers says that the Englishmen are all so made that you can't very well miss them. And then perhaps the Zulus, when they want to int them, aim at something else. One day I was practicing with the assegal at our barn door, making believe that it was an Englishman, when Mr. Carruthers, the butcher, drove by, and the assegal came down and went through his toot, and pinned it in the wagon. But he didn't see me, and I guess he get it out after a while, though I never get it out after a white, though I never saw it again.

But what the lecturer taught us about bull-fights was worse than anything else.
Tom McGinnis' father has a terrible bull in the pasture, and Tom and I agreed that we'd have a bull-fight, only, of course, we wouldn't hurt the bull.

All we wanted to do was to show our parents how much we had learned about the geography and habits of the Spaniards.
Tom McGinnis' sister Jane. who i twelve years old, and thinks she knows overything, said she'd be the Queen of Spain, and give Tom and me evergreen wreaths. I got an old red curtain out of the dining-room, and divided it with Tom, so that we could wave it in the bull's face. When a bull runs after a bull's face. When a bull runs after a bull-lighter, the other buil-lighter just waves his red rag, and the bull goes for him and lets the inst bull-fighter escape. The lecturer said that there wasn't any danger so long as one fellow would always wave a red rag when the bull ran after the other fellow, and of course we believed him Pretty nearly all the school came down to the pasture to see our bull-fight. The Queen of Spain sat on the fence, LADE ONLY IT PROCESSOR CROTTLE HERE CORNER TO BE FOLLOW OF THE CORNER TO BE FOLD TO BE FOLLOW OF THE CORNER TO BE FOLLOW OF THE C because there wasn't any other throne and the rest of the fellows and girls stood behind the fence. The bull was pretty savage; but Tom and I had our red rags, and we weren't afraid of him. red rags, and we weren't afraid of him.

As soon as we went into the pasture the bull eame for me, with his head down, and bellowing as if he was out of his red rag, and the bull stopped running after me, and went after lom, just as the lecturer said he would.

I know I ought to have waved my red rag, so as to rescue Tom, but I was so interested that I forgot all about it, and the bull caught up with Tom. I should think he went twenty feet right up into PORTION of the FARVING LAND the air, and as he came down he hit the Queen of Spain, and knocked her about six feet right against Mr. McGinnis, who had come down to the pasture to stop the Color the air, and as he came down he hit the who had come down to the pasture to stop the fight.

It was a good while before I could find anything to make an assegai out of; but after hunting all over the house, I came across a lovely piece of bamboo about ten feet long, and just as light as a feather. Then I got a big knife blade that hadn't any handle to it, and that had been lying in father's tool chest for ever so long, and fastened it on the end of the bamboo. You wouldn't believe how splendidly I could throw that assegai, only the wind would take it, and you couldn't tell when you threw it where it would bring up. The Next United States Senate. Act York Times, No. 9.

While there is no doubt that the Democrats will have a good working majority in the house of representatives of the next congress, the senate is likely to retain its evenly balanced condition. Of the 50 senators who hold over beyond 1883, 26 are Republicans, 23 Democrats, and 1 Readjuster. Of the 26 whose terms expire with the present congress 11 Republicans, 14 Democrats, and 1 Independent. This gives the preslican defeat in 1884. the report can be obtained. The United States fish commission has just dipatched from Washington a car load of young carp. The final destination of the car, which contains 16,000 carp, the largest shipment ever made, is St. Paul. It will be made a point of distribution for Minnesota, Wisconsin and Dakota. At Quincy, the first stopping place on the journey, a distribution of fish intended for stocking Illinois waters will be made. At DesMoines carp will be supplied for Iowa and adjacent country. It is expected that eight days will be consumed in mak ing the round trip. READING, Pa., Nov. 11.-Another

While a reporter was in the rotunda of the New Deming Hotel this forenoon Dr. W. J. Chenoweth entered in answer to a telephone summons to prescribe for a pa-...... $7.00 tient in room 49. On consulting the register the reporter found that 49 was occupied by Kate Claxton and her husband, Mr. C. A. Stevenson. On inquiry of one of the members of the "Two Orphans" company the reporter was informed that "blessed baby"-a son, about 11 months old-had been ailing for several days with a cold. One of his dear little eyes is inflamed, and the mother, 'Miss Claxton," was somewhat alarmed. Hence the presence of Dr. Chenoweth, who prescribed for the little sufferer and relieved the anxiety of the mother and father. The company will leave for Lincoln this at-

Charged with Robbery. S. C. McGlumphy, son of Dr. McGlumphy, president of the Lincoln University, at Lincoln. Ill., was arrested in this city on last Saturday evening on a charge of having robbed the United States Express office at Lincoln of packages containing various sums of money. The crime is alleged to have been committed on last Friday night, at which time the accused disappeared. When arrested he had about $90 in his possession and a railway ticket for Memphis, Tenn. He stoutly asserted his innocence, but he had to go to the county jail, where he remained for a few hours. He was taken to Lincoln seph McClellan, aids. Saturday night.

much difference in their manner of work.

Mr. Hughes is the exhorter and one only needs to hear him to be convinced that he is deeply in earnest. He has a good command of lauguage and his expressions are strong. He is down on the whisky traffic that 12 years of his life had been spent in dissipation, but he had seen the error of his ways and had consecrated himself to the noble work of attempting to save old and young men from filling drunkards' graves. Mr. Ward is the quieter and less demonstrative speaker of the two. His remarks are of an argumentative charac-
